THEORY

Into love and out again,

Thus went I, and thus I go.

Spare your voice, and hold your pen

Well and bitterly I know

All the songs were ever sung,

All the words were ever said;

Could it be, when I was young

Some one dropped me on my head?

CLUB LETTER BOX

THANKYOU to those people who have said they enjoyed the last issue. We hope to be informative on the Edmonton gay scene, and those expressions of faith are much appreciated. Some even went so far as to say "best we've ever had"!

We are sincerely eager to put out a paper of interest to club members about the club activities as well as providing information on what's happening about town, which may be of interest.

Anyone who has ideas on how we might improve your paper please let us know by dropping us a note c/o CLUB 70, P.O. Box 1716. Thanks.

SUMMARY OF GATE LESBIAN DROP-IN -FEB 16, 1974

This drop-in, long anticipated by the all-male membership of Gate, brought out several Edmonton gay women for the purpose of finding out areas of mutual involvement and interest. Gate has found that certain activities and problems could not be dealt with solely by the gay men who run Gate. For example, when women call us seeking help or information we have had no female members to turn to. This, plus other activities such as public education have shown us that we are some what one-sided, representing only the male faction of gay society. So Edmonton lesbians and gay men got together on Sat, Feb 16 to work out some possibilities for integration of effort.

The first half of the meeting focused on individual philosophies, ideas, and past experiences. For many present, this was a reiteration of much of what had already been discussed on several previous occasions; but this was the first time the Gate collective discussed anything formally with it's female counterparts. Most individuals repeated ideas on the age of consent issue, experiences of discrimination (such as in employment or immigration), how people new to the gay scene can meet other gays, political activity, and the general social atmosphere in Edmonton. Even if nothing radically new was brought up, the discussion at least confirmed areas of mutual interest and concern. By the end of this first discussion everyone was ready for specific recommendations.

Into the second half of our meeting it became apparent that even though many areas of mutual need were recognized, no one could specify just how these could be accommodated. It was acknowledged that lesbians have problem areas that no male organization can really handle-personal feelings and attitudes unique to their milieu and distinctively different social structures. This array of similarities and differences gave rise to several significant questions: Can and should Edmonton's gay women be assimilated into GATE'S organizational framework, traditionally male, and still maintain some degree of autonomy or identity? Should the lesbians form a new group of their own, and then work with Gate as needs arise? Can and should Gate be sufficiently changed to remove its male identity, subsequently incorporating the male and female factions into an integrated organization?

These were just a few of the questions considered, the essential points being: 1- In what direction is the organization GATE going?

2-What are the separate and collective needs of Edmonton's gays and how can some kind of formalized structure(s) meet these needs?

It seemed obvious from the turn-out that there is indeed an interest in and a need for active gay solidarity in Edmonton. Most of us present, however, had various degrees of commitment to that need: many didn't want affiliation with an organization simply because of past experience- too much hassle with fund raising, lack of man(or woman) power, and lack of specified goals or direction and subsequent splintering (it is interesting to note that male or female sexism didn't seem to establish itself as a valid reason for not becoming affiliated with a gay liberation organization). Also, some women did not want to commit themselves to political activism, whereas others did want to answer our telephone "hotline". So the comments would vary, but this should not be detrimental to the organization as long as each area of activity is adequately staffed and funded. The ultimate advantage of Gate would then be integration into a unified effort for gay liberation, where all information and help is readily available.

LESBIAN DROP-IN (Conclusion)

At last it was suggested that the women decide amongst themselves just what role they wish to play in GATE, if any, or if they will remain separate. By the time of Gate's March 7 General meeting, when our own structure will be stabilized, we should know just how integrated an effort we will have.

From the results and attitudes of the Feb 16 meeting this effort looks positive indeed.

POETRY READINGS

Contemporary Canadian poet, Susan Musgrave, author of Grave dirt and selected strawberries, will be giving a selection of readings in the Edmonton Room of the Centennial Library on:

Friday, March 8 at 7:30 PM

Admission to the series is free.

s to tentons dms and "stretches" vug s aiwleiv toniw jad brad

In early 1971 a group of people looked at the services available for those in distress. There was TRUST (drugs), Child Abuse, 911 Emergency, and the Salvation Army Suicide Bureau...but nothing for those suffering from depression, general crisis, or those seeking information on the wide range of social services in Edmonton.

In 1972 this group laid down two objectives:

1-to provide a line to those who need calming in order to view personal problems more objectively.

2-to provide a referral service to those who needed long term aid.

The group examined similar organizations in other cities and found volunteers were better suited to the task than professionals, provided the professional back-up was available. Volunteers were more sympathetic and understanding. They had a wider range of communicative skills & empathy. A short training program provides the volunteer with the additional skills of handling specific serious calls. This program takes 40 hours, and covers marriage problems, boy-girl and interpersonal difficulties, loneliness, depression and suicide.

The referral service has a data bank with info on nearly 1,000 social service organizations.

Rosemarie Solomon of AID will be the guest speaker at the GATE DROP-IN on March 23, at Gate House. The address is 11012-86 Ave. The meeting starts at 7:30 PM.

A six week television series called- "SEXUALITY" began Tuesday, Feb 19 at 9 PM on television North (Cable 13).

I contacted Margot Nance, the producer of the series to find out what it was all about.

The program is a half-hour informal rap session with volunteers who are not professional social workers or counsellors, etc, but parents who are concerned about their own prejudices and how these may affect their children. The program is designed to encourage self-analysis regarding personal attitudes, fears and insecurities and how children may be affected by these.

Unfortunately we didn't learn about the program early enough for it to be included in our Feb. issue.

The programs are outlined below:

Feb 19-dealt with children 0-6 years and the totality of those ages sexuality. The oneness of the mind and body in the early years.

Feb 26-KNOWLEDGE SEEKERS dealt children 6-11 years, the vigour and enthusiasm for life which kids that age exhibit. It was to promote a greater awareness of kids and how they view their physical bodies and the language they use to express their feelings about body processes. Some of the language causes parental rejection because of the words themselves, but these words are expressions of questions for which honest answers are sought-not rejection.

Kids these ages copy men and women around them in a kind of "hero-worship" to identify with the adult world.

Mar 5- ADOLESCENT-FOOLISH & WISE uses a lot of graphics and plenty of music with heavy rock beats. Young peoples music. "Porno's Harmless"-if you get off on it you probably don't have a great imagination. There is a cartoon of two men looking at each other- "Attraction": and another of a hard-hat worker viewing a guy with long hair carrying a flower-" Are you a long-haired fag?" and a commentary on both situations. Many parents feel failure and insecurity if they feel their child is becoming a homosexual but these fears fail to recognize that sexuality is only one aspect of a very wide range of human qualities and therefore it can be considered largely unimportant in the entire structure of his or her social being. The parents should be more concerned about their child's TOTAL development.

The program covers homosexuality a bit, pornography a bit and masturbation a lot.

Mar 12- BARE FACTS This show is the only one with some medical basics. There is a short discussion on male-female anatomy and birth control. A lot of kids don't know the formal words for parts of their bodies so slang words are used as the verbal tools of communication. The program publicises groups like AID (see article later in this issue) which has a referral service and a distress line. This is because a girl 16 years old is not likely to look under "G" for government if she is pregnant and needs help!

There is a taped interview of such a girl with her doctor and also with her mother. The mother is more concerned with what her neighbors will think than with what her child is experiencing.

Mar 19-ADULT RELATIONSHIPS Relationships are not always found formed in a legal context and if they are hetero or homosexual or have a vast age difference is not as important as whether or not it has depth and quality, feeling of like & love, and mutual respect. These are the really important criteria.

A while ago, while reading some back issues of a now defunct but excellent Lesbian publication called "The Ladder", I came across a cartoon which initially struck me as rather funny. It depicted four or five women walking out of a clothes closet. The caption read: "Let's meet at your place next week, Bev...your closets bigger." Upon mulling over its meaning however, the reality of the sad message struck me hard. Why are lesbians so closeted? A friend of mine coined the word vaulted as more accurate for many lesbians she knows here in Edmonton. Again, WHY??

Fear seems to rule our lives, a fear that is real and compelling and that cannot but curb our efforts or inclinations to BE, let alone be ourselves. I know for I was a member of that terrified group a few years ago, and now I wonder what I was afraid of. Though I lived with another lesbian, we were very careful to appear as roommates in public; we dared NOT use endearing words, touch each other, sit in any but a ladylike fashion (whatever that is), wear slacks or associate publicly with other known lesbians (birds of a feather...you know!). If we read an occasional book about gays, the book was destroyed immediately after we'd read it lest "someone" find it and suspect our natural bent. Worse still we never, but never uttered the word lesbian and we shunned any conversation regarding gays for it made us feel to self-conscious, uncomfortable... and of course would have revealed our awesome secret...and what would they have thought if "they" knew? In desperate fear we lived in a twilight world of our own making somewhere between the dull heterosexual way of life and the gayer style of other lesbians who were proud to be just that. Yet, we longed to meet other gays and to socialize with our own people hidden somewhere in our city.

Where to safely meet other gays? How to approach them? Ah! That was the puzzler. We drifted apart, my friend and I and, whereas she is still hiding from her own shadow, I luckily met Louanne who pulled, prodded, pushed and argued until I dared to venture into the sunlight. Now I am happy, delighted and proud to be a lesbian, in love with a world I once shunned and feared. "There is nothing to fear but fear itself"...now I am a member of Club 70 and love it for there I can mingle freely with my own people, and I can be truly myself.

This is a plea to all my sisters who still hover in the shadows to come out amongst our own. I don't mean the hauling out of banners proclaiming our lesbianism, nor shouting of our pride in what we are, for all the world to hear - no, not that, but simply the abandonment of our self-imposed isolation and fears in order to mingle with other lesbians. The feeling of happiness which this engenders, the freedom to be oneself which this meeting of hearts provides is a fantastic experience. Brian, elsewhere in the NEWSLETTER, tenders an invitation to all lesbians to attend the G.A.T.E. General Meeting on March 7th, and I want to join him in urging you to come one and all. This is our chance to meet with other lesbians, to find understanding, support and companionship amongst our own.

A final word. I have been asked to submit news items regarding lesbians in Edmonton and I would be delighted to oblige but I need your help. Anyone with ideas please contact me at the CLUB or leave a message at the door. Many thanks. Hope to see you all at the CLUB and on the 7th of March.

TERRI BEA.

SEXUALITY SERIES ( Con't)

Children can grow outside the traditional nuclear family (mom & dad in the centre with the kids around). The parents should be more aware of this and realize communal or homosexual relationships don't ruin the child. The feelings and depth can be much greater than in traditional relationships.

Mar 26- STRAIGHT FROM THE KIDS begins with a little 10 year old girl and ends with a 17 year old young man. It shows how kids view parents and how well they do understand parents attitudes (ie: kids are more perceptive than given credit for.), The message is to not try so hard and parents would likely do a better job. Forget the stork stories and tell the truth, otherwise the kids have to unlearn the ridiculous they were fed and learn the reality.

Wauneita Chambers of the Dept. of Ed. psych. at the U. of A. leads the sessions. She has an incredibly wide range of experiences resulting from exposure to several different cultures and the attitude differences etc.

Bob B. is looking at the reasons for this loss which is significant. Anyone who feels the Club could be improved in any way let us know.
